Victorian Skin Pamela K Gilbert

Reading for patterns in Victorian literature, Gilbert employs four 'thought categories' in her examination of skin which emerged in this period: the first considers skin as a way of sensing and expressing self, another regards it as a permeable boundary, a third as alienable substance and a final one as a site of inherent, or inscribed, properties. Alongside these themes, Gilbert examines ...

"Victorian Skin is the prehistory of our obsession with our visible bodies. Pamela K. Gilbert's engagement with the Victorians' reading of the skin, from their sense of it as an envelope that holds our very self to the tattoos that reveal our inner essence, is sophisticated and extraordinary. A must read for everyone who owns a mirror!"
